Nursing at Med Center Health

Makenzie Beals, RN

[MAKENZIE BEALS]

I knew from probably in middle school that I wanted to be a nurse. I graduated last May and I work in the newborn nursery here at Med Center. I started taking on post-partum and that's really where I found my love for, you know, taking care of moms and babies and being in that field.

One of the things that sets the Med Center apart is there's so many different aspects to Med Center. You know, we have the med school, the nursing program – there's so many things that Med Center does. It's such a big hospital, but it feels like I have family here. I walk in and I know smiling faces are there to greet me at the door – and I think that's what made me gravitate toward Med Center.
